

THE TRUTH OF THE HISTORY OF THE STATE OF ISRAEL AND THE EMERGENCE AND INFLUENCE OF ZIO-FASCISM

How the 1917 Balfour Declaration caused the modern Israel-Palestine conflict

In November 1917, the British government issued the Balfour Declaration, a short but important statement of imperial policy.

The letter from Foreign Secretary Arthur Balfour to Lord Rothschild expressed support for establishing a “national home for the Jewish people” in Palestine.

Though vague in its promises, the document caused lasting problems by setting in motion disputes over land ownership and administration.

The historical context of the Balfour Declaration:

Takeaways:

The Balfour Declaration helped draw the U.S. into WWI.

The Balfour Declaration was intended to gain support from Jewish communities, particularly in the United States, which was seen as crucial for encouraging the U.S. to join the war effort on the side of the Allies. By expressing support for a Jewish homeland in Palestine, Britain aimed to strengthen its ties with Jewish populations and influence American public opinion.

The Hidden US Role in the Balfour Declaration

Nov 1, 2019 - By David Makovsky - Times of Israel

Before Britain would declare its support for the Zionist cause, it wanted Woodrow Wilson's public approval -- but the American president needed convincing.

Balfour was a milestone for the Zionist movement, as the right of a “national home for the Jewish people” was recognized by a leading global power, Great Britain. The Declaration was particularly important as Britain was poised to assume control over Palestine, and instead acknowledged the Jewish’s people connection to the land. The Declaration presented a highwater mark for the UK-Zionist relationship.

However, Balfour was not only a milestone for the Zionists’ relationship with Britain, but also with the United States. In fact, if not for the US, it is likely that the Declaration would have never occurred.

Who Wrote the Balfour Declaration and Why: The World War I Connection

October 26, 2017 - By Alison Weir - Palestine Chronicle

Most analysts consider WWI a pointless conflict that resulted from diplomatic entanglements rather than some travesty of justice or aggression. Yet, it was catastrophic to a generation of Europeans, killing 14 million people.

The United States joined this unnecessary war a few years into the hostilities, costing many American lives, even though the US was not party to the alliances that had drawn other nations into the fray. This even though Americans had been strongly opposed to entering the war and Woodrow Wilson had won the presidency with the slogan, "He kept us out of war."

President Wilson changed course in 1917 and plunged the US into that tragic European conflict. Approximately 320,000 Americans were killed or injured. Over 1,200 American citizens who opposed the war were rounded up and imprisoned, some for years.

A number of reasons were publicly given for Wilson's change of heart, including Germany's submarine warfare, Germany's sinking of the British passenger ship Lusitania, and a diplomatic debacle known as the Zimmerman Telegram episode.

Historians also add pro-British propaganda and economic reasons to the list of causes, and most suggest that a number of factors were at play.

While Americans today are aware of many of these facts, few know that Zionism appears to have been one of those factors. [Zionism was a political movement to create a Jewish state in Palestine. When this movement began, in the late 1800s, the population of Palestine was 96 percent Muslim and Christian. The large majority of Jews around the world were not Zionists.]

Diverse documentary evidence shows that Zionists pushed for the US to enter the war on Britain's side as part of a deal to gain British support for their colonization of Palestine.

The Treachery of the Nazi-Zionist Alliance

June 24, 2024 - By Stefan Moore - Consortium News

As uncomfortable as it may be to many, Israel's current apartheid policies took shape in the lead up to the Holocaust when Nazi Germany and a small group of influential Zionists formed an alliance to build their ethno-nationalist states.

On Aug. 25, 1933, German Zionists signed an agreement with the Nazi government that allowed some wealthy German Jews to immigrate to Palestine in exchange for purchasing German goods that were then exported to the Jewish community in Palestine.

As part of the deal, the Zionists also agreed to lobby the global Jewish community to end their boycott of German goods that began when Hitler came to power.

A 1933 memo from the Zionist Federation of Germany to the Nazi party promised:

The Cult of the Chosen Ones | Makia Freeman

Jan 31, 2026 - Macroaggressions

To truly understand what is happening in the world today, it is imperative to go back 400 years, to the time of the Sabbatean-Frankists and the early rise of the Rothschilds. A small, deeply embedded group of Satanists hijacked an entire religion, created splinter groups of competing factions under their control, built central banks throughout every country in the world, and even sparked both World Wars.

Makia Freeman is finally connecting all of the dots of Zionism. He is exposing the game of central banking and the ancient poison of usury, as well as explaining how Palestine was stolen through the combined efforts of British bankers, American diplomats, and even Adolf Hitler.
